Minamoto original Japanese eyewear announces exciting new collection

Material and structural contrasts inspired by Japanese Zen

Minamoto: it's the new name for original Japanese eyewear. This contemporary and elegant collection unites elements of Japanese culture and history with Japanese Zen philosophy.

The result? Premium titanium frames that are eye-catching and comfortable. Minamoto focuses on the essentials with no compromise on quality – so whilst the frame styles are minimalist, the frame feeling is maximum satisfaction.

The first Minamoto collections were a great success. Admirers were quick to respond to the authentic Japanese style, superior materials and unique decorative details.

10 new looks merge Minamoto's spirit with fresh design influences. The beauty of opposites is the key inspiration, derived from the Zen philosophy of a-um, meaning beginning and ending of things. Nowadays, the meaning is loosely interpreted as the best combination of two opposite things. Volume interplays and material mixes bring this essence to life in striking titanium and acetate-titanium frames. Panto, geometric and rounded models are individually named after a wise Zen word, enhancing their pure Japanese pedigree.

Beta titanium and bio acetate appear in this new collection, providing more flexibility and design versatility. And as with all Minamoto frames, these new glasses are made of Japanese titanium, which is the highest quality level on the market. Another highlight is the sumi-nagashi pattern, which is featured on some acetate styles. Sumi-nagashi is one of the traditional techniques used for making Washi paper, to add peaceful expressions such as flowing rivers. Connoisseurs of the brand know that this special Washi paper is also used for the cases, which creates a beautiful connection.

As longevity is a key priority for Minamoto, the nose pads of all collections are made of raw titanium, which never requires replacement. To add a luxurious touch and to ensure that the frames blend in around the nose and the centre of the face, the rose and gold frames of the third collection feature gold plated nose pads. The new collection also benefits from an upgraded antique finishing in colours gold and grey.

PROMOTES NEW MINAMOTO COLLECTION

The new Minamoto collection is brought to vivid life in a striking new image campaign. The Zen word a-um, as the collection's design inspiration, forms the heart of this campaign.
